HARMON ANSWERS GOVERNOR

Denies the Latter's Charges Regarding Railway Taxation

MATTER NOT IN ISSUE

Governor Harris a Stockholder in Banks in Which Were Deposited State Funds.

Greenville, O., Oct. 8.—Judson Harmon in his speech at Greenville, Wednesday evening, said in part:

"When I answered Governor Harris' charges about non-payment of railroad taxes and failure to comply with the safety appliances laws I had to depend on my recollection. Since my return home I have enquired of my officials and counsel about those matters and they confirm what I said.

I have paid every dollar of taxes due on any of the roads of which I have charge by virtue of my appointment as receiver, including branch lines of the C. H. & D., of which I am nominally president, to keep up their corporate existence. No suits have been brought for unpaid taxes, and the only claim ever made is that these branch lines which do no business whatever should pay 1 per cent on the gross receipts from the business done over them by the C. H. and D., although as receiver of that company I have already paid this tax and the law does not authorize double taxation.

The track in Lima which the Governor mentions, is operated and treated as a mere switch track of the C. H. & D., which it is in fact. It reaches two industries, Ohio Steel Foundry and Solar Refining company. I do not make payments from myself in one capacity to myself in another capacity, as the Governor says, and if I did there could be nothing out of it.

It is impossible for me to give personal attention to cars and engines, but I know my officers and men are faithful and diligent and have done their utmost to comply with the laws as I directed. A letter from the Interstate Commerce Commission, November 22d last, to J. A. Gordon, my general superintendent, referring to the reports of their inspectors says:

"Judging from the last six months' reports I would say that the equipment on your line compares very well with other large carriers." I did not know any proceedings had been taken for failure to comply with this law. None had been brought to my attention. I find today that there were a few, but they were excusable under the circumstances and have not been pressed. It has been impossible to comply strictly and promptly with the law in a short time and my men have done fully as well as those of other lines against all of which some proceedings were had the same as against the C. H. & D.

If the Governor wishes to pursue his unfounded charges against the railroad in my care, I refer him to my men who have always shown in the performance of their duties the qualities in which the Governor has proved sadly lacking as chief executive of the state.

But if in spite of these plain facts, which are well known, Governor Harris persists in charging that I have "openly and wantonly" failed to comply with the safety appliance laws, the motive for his silence and inaction with reference to the graft in the deposits of state funds may be expected. I have heretofore accounted for his conduct on the unwillingness of the state to take measures against his political associates.

I have no financial interest whatever in any of the properties which are temporarily in my hands under court orders. It would not make the court orders. (Continued on page 6, 6th col.)

SILVER IS MISSING

SHERWOOD HOTEL IS BEING SYSTEMATICALLY ROBBED BY UNKNOWN THIEF.

Pieces Turn Up Missing Every Few Days—Police Assistance Asked By Manager Scott.

Manager Harry Scott of the Sherwood hotel, has just about decided that there is a "Haffies" around the hotel. In fact, he is pretty positive on that point, for lately a quantity of silverware has vanished and no clue has been found of the thief even though a careful watch has been kept in the hope of landing the guilty person.

Still the silver continues to disappear in the most unaccountable manner in spite of the vigilance exercised in the hope of trapping the thief, and Manager Scott has now enlisted the services of the police in the hope that some clue may be obtained that will cause the petty thieving to stop. The amount of the stolen silver is now quite large and every now and then another report of missing ware is called to his attention. No particular person is suspected.

POST OFFICE RECEIPTS ARE INCREASING

Monthly Report Shows a Splendid Gain and a Neat Balance Will Be Forwarded Government.

The Newark postoffice has been doing a rushing business, the receipts for the month of September this year, over-running those of the same month last year to the extent of $491.22. The following sums were derived: From sale of stamps, $3141.00; stamped envelopes, $749.45; postal cards, $295.50; stamp books, $180.70. Making a total of $4366.65.

The report for the quarter ending September 30, was as follows: Derived from the sale of postage stamps, special delivery stamps, postal cards, stamped envelopes and books of stamps, $12,356.44; profit on stamped envelopes in odd lots, $5.84; postage at one cent a pound on newspapers mailed by publishers, $116.46; box rents, $240.60. Total, $12,719.34. This is an increase over the corresponding quarter of last year of $347.10, and after the payment of the salaries of local employees and eight railway postal clerks, there remains a balance of $2,034.81 due the government.

Atwell and Drake Claim Bribe Was Offered Them

POLICE HAVE RECOVERED THE MISSING PLUMES

All the plumes stolen from the Hoover millinery store Tuesday night have been recovered by the police, and though the burglar, a well known young fellow of Newark, has not been arrested, his arrest is but the matter of a short time, unless the proprietor of the store decides not to prosecute the case.

Chief Zergebel and Officers Carroll and Hager were at work on the case early Wednesday morning, and by noon they secured a clue that led to the recovery of the stolen plumes and revealed the identity of the man who took them. An afternoon trip was made to Railroad street by the two officers, and they soon gathered the missing property. The plumes had been sold to inmates of two resorts for the sum of $9 for the lot, worth probably $150.

PROCLAMATIONS BY PRINCES.

The Prince of Bulgaria proclaimed himself king about the same time that Prince Nicholas proclaimed at Rock Island, Ill., that Teddy is planning to return to the throne in 1916, after Taft has been a tenant in the white house eight years. But the people of this country are growing weary of being ruled. They are about to decide that they will put an end to the succession-in-office scheme whereby Roosevelt would perpetuate his dynasty, and do the ruling themselves after March 4, 1909.

Legal Question Arises in Columbiana County—Wets Will Contest Wyandot.

Sidney, Oct. 8.—At the local option election Wednesday, Shelby county went wet by 939 majority, Sidney by 65. Seven townships Clinton, Franklin, Perry, Green, Orange, Washington and Turtle Creek, went dry, the other seven townships wet. Women were at the polls all day, and prayer meetings were held. The result was a surprise. There are 33 saloons in the county.

LEGAL QUESTION ARISES.

Lisbon, Oct. 8.—A pretty legal question has come up since the local option election was held in this county last Saturday. In East Liverpool and Wellsville the wets rolled up a majority of over 300; 16 months ago the dries carried these towns.

A prominent law firm holds that a town cannot be voted dry under one law before the time limit has expired; to be voted dry for a longer term than during the first election. The contention is made that under the law East Liverpool and Wellsville have voted wet. Other opinions are to be obtained and if it is found that the majority of these agree with the above view the election will be taken into the courts.

DRYS WIN BY 52.

Upper Sandusky, Oct. 8.—The board of deputy supervisors of elections Wednesday afternoon canvassed the vote of the local option election, and found the result to be 52 majority for the dries. It is rumored that the wets contemplate contesting the election, alleging that a number of men voted illegally at Harpster.

WAYNE TO VOTE TODAY.

A local option election will be held in Wayne county today.

ESCAPED PRISONER RETURNS.

Urbana, Ohio, Oct. 8.—Joe Dickerson, who broke out of the county jail here, walked into police headquarters last night and gave himself up.

BRYAN FAVORS THE DEEP WATER WAY MOVEMENT

Chicago, Oct. 8.—W. J. Bryan was the leading speaker before the Deep Waterways convention today. Preceding his address, a paper prepared by James Hill, of the Great Northern railway, was read, in which Hill expressed approval of the waterways plan, but said the policy of those who desire that public credit be pledged to unheard of amounts in order to complete the whole work at once is reckless, foolish and almost criminal. Mr. Bryan pledged his earnest cooperation to the movement for deep waterways from the Lakes to the Gulf, and was cheered as he was escorted from the hall to resume his speaking tour.

RESULT OF TEST VOTE

As a result of a straw vote taken by the Enquirer in six of the largest manufacturing establishments of Cincinnati on Wednesday, it is shown in connection with the total vote that 53 Democrats will change to Republicans and 210 Republicans change to Democrats on the National ticket, while on the State ticket 57 Democrats will change to Republican and 263 Republicans change to Democrat. This vote gives a good line on the sentiment in Cincinnati. It shows that Bryan's gain over Parker is 60 per cent, and Taft's loss under Roosevelt is 15 per cent.

GREAT CROWD IS PRESENT

New York Oct. 8.—Thirty thousand people crowded the Polo grounds today to witness the game between the Cubs and the Giants which will decide the National league championship.

EX-MEMBER OF NEWARK TEAM WEDDED TUES.

A beautiful home wedding occurred Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Hoover, 611 East Gambier street, Mt. Vernon, when they gave in marriage their daughter, Miss Zaidah Leota, to Mr. Ned William Iger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Iger, and one of Mt. Vernon's popular young men.

The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. L. O. Newcomer. The couple stood in front of a mantle, which was banked with cut flowers and ferns. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Tompkins of Toledo. Immediately following the ceremony a delicious four-course wedding dinner was served.

Mrs. Iger is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Stockberger and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stockberger of this city, and formerly lived here. Mr. Iger is well known in Newark, having at one time been a member of the Newark ball team, as well as several other teams that were in the O. P. league. After a short trip they will be at home at 611 East Gambier street, Mt. Vernon.

SENSATION PROMISED

PHILADELPHIA MAN SHOT IN BACK AND WIFE AND HER SISTER UNDER ARREST.

Women Claim Deed Was Done in Self Defense—Inquest Promises to Reveal Startling Results.

Philadelphia, Oct. 8.—Investigation by a coroner's jury yesterday, which revealed that Captain J. Clayton Erb, well known in Philadelphia society and personal circles, was killed by bullets which entered his back, promises an additional tinge of sensationalism to the mystery which is today the talk of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Katherine Beizel, sister of Mrs. Erb, is under arrest, and despite her statement that she fired the shot in self defense, is today facing a charge of murder in the first degree. Mrs. Erb was also placed under arrest. Mrs. Beizel says she wrested a revolver from Erb and killed him when he sought to take her life for protecting her sister.

Today's developments reveal that Erb was attired in his pajamas at the time he was shot. The body was found in a corridor on the second floor, where both Mrs. Beizel and Mrs. Erb say the shooting took place. They admit, however, that the quarrel occurred on the floor below. Coroner Carr and several deputies are making a thorough investigation, and the inquest held last evening is expected to result in some sensations that will prove startling to Philadelphia high society.

The police version today of the killing of Clayton Erb is that Erb, returned from sleep, entered the dimly lighted hall and was knocked down by his wife with a brass cuspidor and that Mrs. Beizel, his wife's sister, deliberately shot him to death as he lay on the floor. Detectives in the pay of Israel Durham, Republican leader and friend of Erb, are working on the theory that Erb was deliberately done to death by the two women. He is said to have recently transferred much of his property to his wife, and on the supposition that she and her sister, fearing the loss of this property, plotted Erb's death, the prosecution today is trying to develop a case.

DEFIANCE HURLED AT THE POWERS

Crete Issues Decree Announcing Union of Island With Greece

INSURGENTS REJOICE

Had Contended for Alliance for Over Fifty Years—Government Taking Precautions.

Canea, Island of Crete, Oct. 8.—The goal for which the brave people of this island have fought for over fifty years has been reached. No longer will Turkey or any other Power hold sway over them, for, following the example of Bulgaria, the glove of defiance has been hurled at the feet of the dominant nations by a decree announcing the union of Crete with Greece, published here last evening.

Events leading up to the climax followed each other throughout the day with dramatic rapidity. The town was bedecked with flags and early in the morning people began flocking in from all directions.

There was much firing of guns and revolvers, with plenty of cheering, but perfect order prevailed. Mussulmans mingled with Christians freely and unmolested.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon a demonstration in favor of union with Greece occurred on the military review ground. More than 100,000 people, one of the largest crowds ever seen here, gathered at this place.

All the prominent revolutionary leaders, each with his banner flying, appeared, and they were supported by those of different political parties, the mayors of the towns, the clergy and others influential in the councils of the island.

Speeches were made by various representatives, who declared that the peaceful political revolution which they had assembled to consummate was not directed against the power which had been the island's benefactor, but solely at proclaiming the island's union with the motherland.

They called upon the government to act henceforth in the name of the free Kingdom of Greece. They urged the people as a duty to go respectfully and announce their decision to the representatives of the Powers. Then they must call together an assembly to confirm the people's decision by an official vote.

Ten thousand men thereupon marched singing and shouting, to the various consulates, leaving at each of them a written copy of the resolutions adopted. They then surged to the governor's palace and lowered the flag of Crete, raising the Greek flag in its place.

The flags on all the public buildings were similarly replaced by the flag of Greece.

With incessant and wild cheering for the union, the great procession made its way to the fortress, where a Greek flag also was sent up to the top of a flagstaff, but the French troops insisted upon lowering it, and unfurled the flag of Crete and those of the four protesting Powers.

Thousands of people from outlying districts, most of them armed, are still pouring into the town, filling the streets and cheering the union. The government is taking special precautions to preserve order, and all the public buildings are strongly guarded.

DONT FEAR THE LIGHT

Spirits Will Come Out Boldly.

Sunday night, Oct. 11, at the Auditorium theatre, Dr. Sawyer, the noted medium, will give a seance for the purpose of demonstrating spirit power in the light. The following are some of the demonstrations given: Sawyer's open light seance, given by him before the leading scientific societies of England, Austria, Germany and France, and will be submitted to the most crucial test conditions. A table rises and floats in the air, flowers are brought to the audience by unseen hands, slate writing, questions written and retained by the interrogators will receive full and intelligent answers. Mr. Sawyer is the only gentleman in the world who has the endorsement of the Royal Society of London, they having for three months tested in ever conceivable manner that human ingenuity could suggest, and at the finish of these investigations presented him with a parchment certifying that the manifestations given in their presence were beyond human aid. All are welcome.

Do not wait for some pupil to coax you to buy a season ticket for the High school lecture course; if you do, you may get left.

DENISON HARMON CLUB MEETING A GRAND SUCCESS

Hon. B. F. McDonald Addresses Students and Others on Issues of the Day.

Granville, O., Oct. 8.—The first Democratic meeting of the campaign for Granville, was held by the Denison Harmon club, a club composed of Denison university students, in the beautiful Cleveland hall of this place on Wednesday evening. The meeting was held at 6:30 o'clock. The hour was unusual for a political meeting, but it could not be otherwise, on account of the students having to study. As it was there was quite a goodly number of the students in attendance at the meeting, as well as a number of Democrats from Newark.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. L. D. Sargent, the president of the Denison Harmon club, who, in a few well-chosen words, introduced the speaker of the evening—Hon. B. F. McDonald, of Newark, who delivered a most forceful address.

Mr. McDonald upon taking the floor thanked the Denison club for the honor that had been conferred upon him in inviting him to address the club and delivered one of the most forceful and brilliant speeches ever heard in Granville. Mr. McDonald, in his address, dwelt at some length upon all the principal issues of the campaign, both national and state. He spoke of the promises that had been made in the Republican platform, and the failure of the Republican party to fulfill these promises, although it has been in absolute power in every part of our national government for the past twelve years. He had compared the two platforms and had found that every subject treated in the Republican platform was fully covered by the Democratic platform, and that the subjects were more clearly defined and more in accordance with the interests of the common people. In addition to these subjects he had found that the Democratic platform specifically declared upon a tax for incomes above a reasonable amount and in accordance with the same principle enacted by the republics of Switzerland and France, and the countries of England and Germany, and upon this subject the Republican platform remained silent.

He found that the Democratic platform declares for the election of United States senators by the direct vote of the people, while the Republican platform is silent on this subject.

He found that the Democratic platform declares in favor of removing the duty off trust-made articles, and on that subject the Republican platform is silent.

The Democratic platform declares in favor of a reasonable tax upon the bank to guarantee deposits, and the Republican platform is silent.

The Democratic platform declares in favor of campaign contributions, on which plank the Republicans are silent.

The Democratic party denounces the billion-dollar congress, and the Republican platform is silent.

The Democratic platform denounces the dictation of the president of the United States to nominate and elect his successor. The Republican platform is silent on this matter, and for this reason, the people should elect Bryan.

Mr. McDonald read extracts from the report of the investigating committee appointed by the last legislature to investigate the condition of the state auditor's office and also the office of the state treasury. He showed up the corrupt condition of affairs, lack of business methods that were adopted in the administration of their offices. He said that it was not only the legal duty, but the request was made that Governor Harris have these offices investigated. Yet in the face of this corrupt state of affairs he fails, refuses and neglects to have any such investigation made. Although he holds his position as acting governor of Ohio, by reason of his election to the lieutenant governorship upon a ticket on which Governor Herrick made his fight for re-election against John M. Pattison, and every intelligent voter in Ohio knows the issue of that campaign, yet his only defense to his corrupt administration is an appeal to the people to stand by him, because of his having signed the county local option bill. And the man who is opposing him, Hon. Judson Harmon, whom there is no brighter or more brilliant statesman, and no purer or more temperate man ever headed the Democratic ticket. A man who, in the convention that nominated John M. Pattison, stood by the things that that Pattison stood for, that John M. Pattison was the first governor of Ohio who declared himself in favor of a county local option bill. Judson Harmon, his personal friend, delivered the tribute over the body of Pattison. And but a few months ago, when Harmon had been nominated for governor, Mrs. John M. Pattison sent a Harmon message of congratulation.

The speaker referred to the career of Judson Harmon, showing the ability of the man, which was beyond comparison with that of his opponent. He made reference to the fact that he was a temperance man himself, and that as such temperance man he proposed to vote for a man with a temperance record and who stood above alliance with any organization—a man like Judson Harmon, than to vote for a man who fights the temperance cause one campaign, and then in the next campaign appeals to the temperance people for their support for no other purpose than for political aid.

Mr. McDonald was followed by Deputy County Clerk Ed M. Larson, who devoted his time to the records of the men who are candidates on the Republican ticket for judges or the supreme court.

Mr. Larson maintained that Judge Shauk, who at the end of his present term, will have served fourteen years as such, and is now seeking a third term, is a judicial boss, and is so termed by the judicial reform union of Ohio.

C. R. Sargent, father of the president of the Denison Harmon club, asked the privilege of saying a few words. Mr. Sargent said that although he had been a life-long Republican, he intended to vote the straight Democratic ticket this fall, and wanted everybody to know it. He said that he has known the Hon. Judson Harmon for over thirty years, and that he was one of the brightest, most brilliant and big men the state had ever produced. He showed up in a forcible manner the hypocrisy of Governor Harris on the temperance question.

DAINTY MORSELS FOR AFTERNOON TEA.

Add a piece of rock candy to afternoon tea in place of sugar. Served with Nabisco Sugar Wafers, this will indeed be a revelation. A sample tin will prove how admirably these wafers coincide with the daintiness their name suggests. They are rich, crisp, appetizing, specially refined and delicately flavored. When these Nabisco Sugar Wafers are served watch the faces around the table brighten.

WHAT TAFT DID TO UNION LABOR, NOT FOR UNION LABOR

Mr. Taft said in a speech at St. Louis, "I have done more for union labor than Mr. Gompers."

As he was in Missouri when he said it union labor can say to him in reply, "SHOW ME."

Mr. Taft surely must have been misquoted. In all probability he said, or meant to say, that he had done more "TO" union labor than Mr. Gompers, or anybody else, and he could prove it by his injunctions; just as he is now trying to prove that his injunctions were issued in behalf of labor. Neither labor nor the corporations interested looked upon Mr. Taft's injunctions at the time as doing any thing FOR labor. Everybody understood what Taft was trying to do TO labor.

And they are not through with Gompers yet. His contempt case has been put off until after election. Will you stand by Taft or Gompers?

HOW THEY WORK IT.

When Guilbert, McKinnon, Thompson and Brown had their secret conferences at the state house they doubtless discussed the effect of the county option elections on their political prospects.

All the while Governor Harris was traveling all over Stark county "banging away at temperance."

If the Democratic voters of Ohio can't understand it perhaps they can understand the governor's boast in a speech to a colored club at Columbus, that he never voted anything but the straight Republican ticket in his life for nation, state or county offices, which proves that he didn't vote for John M. Pattison three years ago—when he was a "wet" candidate for lieutenant governor.

This is the way the governor and the bosses are working their "temperance" campaign.

THE ROOSEVELT SUCCESSION.

After referring to the proposition of son-in-law Longworth for Roosevelt to be elected to succeed Taft in 1916, the New York World asks the following very pertinent questions:

"Is Theodore Roosevelt to have a vote of confidence next month? Are the American people to endorse the 1,000,000 Dollar congress the Big Stick, Government by Denunciation, One-Man Power, Republican partnership with Protection, Privilege and Plutocracy, and all the evils, excesses and extravagances of a cowboy administration?"

Excellent Health Advice.

Mrs. M. M. Davidson, of No. 379 Gifford Ave., St. Jose, Cal., says: "The worth of Electric Bitters as a general family remedy for headache, biliousness and torpor of the liver and bowels is so pronounced that I am prompted to say a word in its praise."

THE WEST COOL TO TAFT

Forgery of Ex-President Cleveland's
Name by Republicans.

Mr. Taft Carries Three Press Agents on a Luxurious Train and Has to Send Out Postal Cards to Get People to Greet Him in the Cities.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 1.—Special.—Congressman Ollie James, of Kentucky, who made the speech of the Denver convention in seconding the nomination of Mr. Bryan, has arranged speaking dates in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kansas and Nebraska. Mr. James is a popular speaker, and there are as many demands for his appearance on the stump as any other campaign orator. While a visitor at Democratic National headquarters this week, he said:

"Bryan will be elected president in November by the greatest landslide the country has ever known. The record breaking crowds that greeted Mr. Bryan in Judge Taft's home city and state bespoke the sentiment of voters throughout the nation."

Ex-President Cleveland's Name Forgery.

"The dishonest and corrupt method the Republican party is resorting to in its desperation to defeat Mr. Bryan should cause all honest men to rebuke it," continued Mr. James. "The circulation of the pretended article by Grover Cleveland against Mr. Bryan shows to what extent the Republican party is willing to go in order to entrench in power for four years longer the agents of monopoly and the servants of plutocracy. They were willing not only to desecrate the memory of Mr. Cleveland, but to forge his name to an assault upon Mr. Bryan as well as an arraignment of the Democratic party. A party that is willing to desecrate the dead and prostitute the memory of a great ex-president will hesitate at nothing that is necessary. We may expect them again to invade the trust funds of widows and orphans held by insurance companies; we may expect them again to write other letters to 'My dear Harriman,' who was a director in thirty railroad corporations, corporations that had created a trust upon transportation and monopolized the highways of commerce, telling Harriman we are practical men and asking him to gather up a quarter of a million dollars to be used to elect the Republican party. What difference can the people distinguish between the Standard Oil company sending $50,000 to Senator Foraker to buy up newspapers and further the cause of the Republican party, and Harriman, who at the behest of President Roosevelt, got the trusts and monopolies to contribute $250,000 to be used directly on the voters, except that in the first instance Senator Foraker returned the money to the Standard Oil when he found out he could not purchase the newspapers? But Roosevelt allowed the Republican party to use the money that Harriman contributed to aid in his election. If the President desires in some way to make amends he should at least see that his party returns the money which Harriman contributed, to the widows and orphans of the insurance companies whose funds were depleted by a conscienceless band of pirates in the interest of the Republican party."

Republican Treasurer Trust Magnate.

"The treasurer of the Republican campaign fund is a well known trust magnate, a director in many monopolies; he is a force and power in Wall street. Mr. Wm. Nelson Cromwell who, we are informed, contributed $50,000 to the Republican campaign fund, is also a director in many trusts that the Roosevelt party should have before the courts answering indictments for violating the anti-trust law rather than contributing to the Republican campaign fund."

"Mr. DuPont has resigned, the papers tell us, from the chairmanship of the Speakers Bureau. I presume he resigned from the Speakers Bureau so he could give more time to the preparation of his defense for the violation of the anti-trust law."

The fact that the alleged letter from Ex-President Cleveland, published originally in the New York Times, is a forgery, created no surprise at Democratic headquarters. From the very first the publication of this letter in one of the most partisan papers supporting Judge Taft was regarded as a campaign trick. After exploiting the forgery in Republican papers, campaign managers of that party had this misrepresentation of the dead president circulated as a campaign document. The New York Times has been forced to admit that it defamed Mr. Cleveland's memory when it published the fake interview. Very naturally, Mrs. Cleveland and the executor of the late Ex-President's estate have come forward and exposed this most villainous misrepresentation of the memory of a dead president with in the history of the nation.

Speaking of the exposure of the Times story, Mr. Josephus Daniels, chairman of the Press Bureau, said: "I was in New York when the Times printed the fraudulent Cleveland letter. To my mind, it bore upon its face the evidence that it was a crude forgery, doing violence to the known sentiments of Mr. Cleveland. I found that most of Mr. Cleveland's friends and nearly all the newspaper men believed it to be a fake. Mrs. Cleveland has protected the memory of her distinguished husband by her course in the matter, for the letter, as published, did violence to his utterances and to his public career. I was informed at the time that the forged letter was offered to the New York Herald and to the New York World, but they refused to touch it. The New York Times has a good motto—'All the news that's fit to print.'—It would do well to add—'no false stories printed that other journals refuse.'—Those Republicans who have been spending money derived from trusts to circulate the fraudulent Cleveland letter must, if honest, spend as much money to circulate pamphlets saying that the letter they circulated was a clumsy fraud."

Post Card System.

When Mr. Taft learned that the mountain would not come to Mahomet, he decided that Mahomet must go to the mountain. When he found that the people would not come to him and listen to his speeches from the golf links at Hot Springs and from the front porch of Brother Charlie's palatial residence in Cincinnati, he determined to go out among the people.

Apparently, however, there is grave fear among the Republican leaders that their candidate will not be gladly received by the people. In order to overcome this difficulty and in an effort to bring out a crowd to greet Mr. Taft, the Chicago managers have found it necessary to send out postal card notices to the faithful, begging them to go to the railroad station and give the distinguished visitor "a cordial welcome." During the past few days prominent Republicans have received the following notice from Fred W. Upham, assistant treasurer of the Republican National Committee:

Chicago, September 21, 1908.

Hon. Wm. H. Taft, the Republican party's candidate for president and the people's choice, will arrive in Chicago, Wednesday (September 23) evening at 5 o'clock, at the La Salle Street station of the L. S. & M. S. Ry. Please be at the station with your friends and give him a cordial welcome. It will be Mr. Taft's first visit since the famous convention which nominated him for president. Very truly yours,

Fred W. Upham.

Small Hall for Taft.

To give Mr. Taft an opportunity to explain his attitude toward labor and his injunction record, in a city where hundreds of thousands of laboring men are interested in what he has to say, the Republicans selected a hall with a capacity of less than 2,000 and provided for admission by card only, in order that none but those who agree with him might be allowed to enter. This hall was selected in the heart of the business section after an option on a hall with 15,000 capacity in the center of the working men's district had been refused. The inference is plain that the Republican managers feared to have their candidate appear in a distinctively laboring district where all who would might come and hear, lest the great welcome planned for might be turned into a demonstration for his political opponent, or that Mr. Taft might be asked embarrassing questions.

Stumping Falls Flat.

The fact of the matter is that Mr. Taft's stumping experiment has fallen flat; he has produced absolutely no enthusiasm among the voters, and he has said or done nothing which will improve his chances. Republicans are unable to conceal their feelings of disappointment over the poor showing which their candidate has made. Mr. Taft's progress thus far, and the manner in which he has been received is complete vindication of those Republican leaders who from the first opposed the plan of having him take to the rear platform. They advocated a front porch campaign wherein the candidate should be kept in the background, and others allowed to make his canvass upon Roosevelt's record. The advocates of a stumping campaign prevailed, however, and now they are sorry it was ever begun.

Elegance vs. Simplicity.

The contrast between the Democratic simplicity with which Mr. Bryan has traveled and the elegance of the Taft accommodations on rail, is as marked as the contrast between the size and enthusiasm of the audiences which have greeted the Democratic candidate, and those which Mr. Taft has addressed. While one great New York newspaper which is supporting Mr. Taft and which maintains a press association service has refused to have a correspondent with Mr. Bryan, ample accommodations are afforded aboard the Taft special for the special correspondents of all the large papers. In addition, for the first time in the history of any campaign, Mr. Taft is traveling with him three press agents paid by the national committee for the purpose of influencing public opinion.

Hired Press Agents.

Notwithstanding all this, the reports come from all along the line that Mr. Taft's receptions have been remarkably chilly, and that the audience have been indifferent to his speeches and involved explanations of his attitude upon public questions. At George Ade's Indiana farm a large crowd was gathered because a harvest festival had been advertised. The people expected a free feast from the "full dinner pail," but were disappointed when they were charged 25 cents for dinner while they waited for the appearance of the candidate. When he did come before them he talked about a larger navy, a stronger army and coast defenses, something in which they had little interest, while he ignored the live issues of tariff revision, injunctions, guarantee of bank deposits, publicity of campaign funds, and other questions about which they desired to hear his views. The result was that Mr. Taft's speech was received with inattention and a lack of anything which approached enthusiasm. Impartial newspaper correspondents report that the meeting was not a success. Mr. Bryan is outdrawing Judge Taft by 5 to 1.

Shoes are the most important necessity that you buy. You want them to possess three qualities: Style—Any maker can furnish it. There is no monopoly. Comfort—A matter of proper fitting—good store service. Value—Greatest wear and service for the price paid.

Value is the most important and most difficult quality to get in shoes. The best value can only be produced by the greatest reduction in profits and manufacturing costs.

Senator Crane Trust Ally.

The appearance of Senator W. Murray Crane, of Massachusetts, as chief "advisor" of Chairman Hitchcock in the management of Mr. Taft's campaign, is regarded as further unmistakable evidence of the alliance of the Republican party with the trust interests for the election of Taft. Senator Crane may not be very well known by the farmers and laboring men of the west, but he has a very extensive and intimate acquaintance in Wall street and with the trust protected interests of the east. He belongs to that little coterie of men who rule the United States senate. He is the principal advisor of Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, who stands at the head of the Standard Oil list of senators. Senator Crane is second in command.

The failure of Chairman Hitchcock's campaign for Taft made it necessary for the Republicans to form a closer relationship with the trusts in order to procure funds with which to carry on their propaganda. No man is better suited to do the cementing than is Senator Crane. He is a Republican of high standing and is a trust magnate. His interests lie with those who are monopolists and with the trusts.

MOMENTOUS STEP

Merger of the Pathfinders With the American Insurance Union.

FAVORABLY AFFECTS ALL MEMBERS

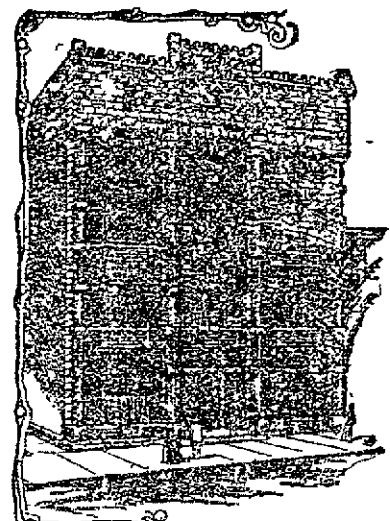

Consolidation Increases the Administrative Efficiency of the Two Orders, Reduces the General Expenses and Makes the A. I. U. Pre-Eminently the Leading Fraternal Order.

Members of the Pathfinders in this city are greatly interested in the announcement that their organization and the American Insurance Union have consolidated. This combination of two great fraternal insurance orders will redound to the personal interest of every Pathfinder and A. I. U. member.

When announcement was made that the American Insurance Union and the Pathfinders had consolidated, the rest of the insurance world at large took notice. This consolidation makes the American Insurance Union even more formidable than it had been. The A. I. U. has long been recognized as the one fraternal insurance order that is properly organized from the ground up. No better evidence of this claim is needed than the recent consolidation of the Pathfinders with the A. I. U.

The headquarters of the 10,000 Pathfinders who are favorably affected by this consolidation have been moved to the beautiful A. I. U. Temple in Columbus, O., where the welfare of the original members of the American Insurance Union and of the Pathfinders will be given equal attention.

The consolidation increases the administrative efficiency of the two orders and reduces the office and general expense. There is no doubt but that the Pathfinders are to be congratulated upon being combined with membership in the American Insurance Union.

A. I. U. TEMPLE, COLUMBUS, O.

ance Union. The A. I. U. has always experienced a healthy growth, and in insurance circles it has been recognized as the best of all insurance orders, and the addition of the Pathfinders to its ranks makes it pre-eminent in the leading fraternal order of the country.

These two united fraternities now have 25,000 members, carrying nearly $30,000,000 of insurance, distributed throughout the different states.

Among the fraternities it is regarded as the greatest and most promising step yet taken in the work of combining the membership and reducing the expenses, all the while increasing the benefits, both social and financial.

The Journal of the Pathfinders contains the following happy account of the consolidation:

Every member of the Pathfinder will rejoice over the good news here announced—that a union has been consummated with the American Insurance Union of Columbus, Ohio.

This union of the two Orders has been effected on terms satisfactory to all concerned. Every Pathfinder certificate is now backed by a reserve fund of the united societies, amounting to over $100,000.

All certificates remain in force on the same payments as heretofore. All Lodges retain their individuality as Pathfinder Lodges of the American Insurance Union. There will be no loss of privilege, prestige or position, but each Lodge and every member can now go to work with renewed zeal and greater enthusiasm than ever before.

How It Was Brought About.

In the last issue of the Pathfinder we published an editorial advocating the idea of consolidation of the smaller Orders, thus forming without delay Orders that would be strong numerically as well as financially. We have been surprised with the number of letters that came to our Supreme Office in response to this editorial.

These letters came from the Supreme Officers of Orders in all sections of the country, each suggesting plans for uniting with them, some asking us to propose and others suggesting plans for consolidation, and after careful consideration of these proposals and the strength and standing of the various Orders from which they came, it was the best judgment of the Supreme Trustees that the proposal to unite with the American Insurance Union was best for us.

The most careful investigation of the condition of the American Insurance Union was made and the history of the Order carefully gone into. We found among other things that the American Insurance Union Started Right.

That it is the only American society that guarantees its members against "double headers" and readjustment of rates. That it is the only fraternal Order that has not found it necessary to readjust its table of rates in the 14 years of its active and successful life.

Why Union is a Good Thing.

There is an old saying that "in union there is strength," but in union of this kind there is much more. There is Strength, Economy, Power and Prestige. Strength that comes from largely increased membership and resources; Economy that comes from the reduced cost of management. It will cost no more to manage the united order of 25,000 members than it costs to manage either one of the Orders singly. There will be but one office and one force of clerks and one set of Supreme Officers to pay out of this common treasury, where before there were two. Where our field men of the two Orders have been meeting in competition, they will now work together for the United Order.

Also come the power and prestige that necessarily follow the fact that our membership is twice as great as it was a week ago, and that we have a reserve fund of $100,000, a beautiful Temple building at Columbus, O., from which the entire work of the two Orders will be directed by the one set of officers.

At the next meeting of the National Chapter of the American Insurance Union, the Pathfinder Lodges will be entitled to representation on exactly the same basis as the members of the American Insurance Union Chapters. The Pathfinder Lodges will be known as Pathfinder Lodges of the American Insurance Union. It may be necessary to change a few Lodge numbers to avoid confusion in keeping the records of the united societies, but this will be the only change necessary, and this change may possibly be avoided. In cities where there are but few members of the Pathfinder it will be advisable for them to take membership immediately in the American Insurance Union Chapter where such Chapters exist, and thus save hall rent and other local expenses. It will now be in order for us to settle down to work together, like every newly married couple should. Remembering that from this time on every Pathfinder is a member in good standing in the American Insurance Union, without change of rates or medical examination, and that back of every certificate is a guarantee of the reserve fund of the United Societies.

Resolutions.

Resolutions of Ohio and Indiana Grand Lodges:

Resolved, By the Trustees of the Grand Lodges of the Pathfinders of Ohio and Indiana, in joint session assembled at Columbus, O., on Monday evening, September 14, 1908,

That the action of the Supreme Lodge in merging the Pathfinders with the American Insurance Union be and the same is hereby ratified and approved as being the best step that could be taken at this time for the best interests of the members of this Order for the protection of its members and its beneficiaries, and that a vote of thanks be and the same is hereby tendered to the Supreme Officers for having so successfully brought about this state of affairs.

Be it further resolved, After having heard the union and merger fully explained, we are of the opinion that nothing could have happened which could better strengthen the ties of fraternalism that bind our members together, nor increase and perpetuate the financial and benevolent advantages and purposes of our Order, and to promote its cardinal principles of Benevolence, Integrity and Loyalty; and,

Be it further resolved, That we recommend that each and all of the members cling steadfastly to their membership under the new name of our Order—the American Insurance Union—and that they rest in the same confidence that we possess that its protecting arms have been strengthened, its field of operations enlarged and its permanency guaranteed. We trust that the advantages of this amalgamation of members be promptly recognized and faithfully supported by all members of the Pathfinder; and,

Be it further resolved, That we emphasize our assurance of confidence in the union and merger by urging with enthusiasm upon the members of the Pathfinders the advantages of this consolidation of our Order with the American Insurance Union, and we most earnestly request that all our Brothers and Sisters in each and all of the lodges of our beloved Order promptly recognize and faithfully support the officers and members of the American Insurance Union in all their good works of the past and in all their high purposes for our united future; and,

Be it further resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the national office of the American Insurance Union in the A. I. U. Temple, Columbus, O., and that a copy be furnished to the American Insurance Journal, with the request that the same be published in the official organ of the order, and also a copy be made by the Secretary of the State Lodges to each Secretary of the Pathfinders, with the request that the same be read to the membership of each lodge.

WORLD CORN EXHIBIT

Great Opportunity For Farmers at Omaha Exposition.

NUMEROUS PRIZES OFFERED.

Best Ten Ears of Corn Will Win $3,000 In Awards—Large Floor Space Devoted to Women's Department. Wheat to Be Given Milling Tests.

More than 100,000 ears of prize corn will be exhibited in Omaha, Neb., at the corn exposition next December for the world's prizes.

The highest prize which will be won on corn will be $1,000 in cash for the best ten ears of corn in the world, and with this will go the champion premier trophy offered by the Mexican government for the world's best ten ears of corn. This trophy is a reproduction of a famous statue of an Aztec chief and worth $1,500.

This will give some farmer—who will doubtless be an American—$250 per ear for ten ears of corn, and as the corn will win, as it earns its admission into the sweepstakes competition, numerous prizes offered by manufacturers of farm machinery the winner will really get about $3,000, or $300 per ear for his corn.

The corn will then be sold at auction for seed and, from past corn show auctions, will bring from $50 to $150 per ear.

Floor space aggregating 16,000 square feet is to be devoted to the women's department, which will embrace model kitchens and domestic science rooms, where prize bread will bring $50 per loaf, corn muffins $110 per dozen and an ordinary kitchen apron $40.

But in all the plans for King Corn the exposition management is not overlooking the importance of small grains and grasses.

Wheats are to be given the milling test, and before prizes are awarded the wheat will have to make good bread—the best bread, in fact. In this work the grain exchanges and boards of trade of the five leading primary grain markets are co-operating, and their chief inspectors will be among the judges of grains.

MISSOURI MULES TO INDIA.

English Captain Says Kansas City is the World's Best Mule Market.

The Missouri mule is at the front again. Forty animals are to be shipped in a few weeks to Liverpool, England, and then to Calcutta, India, to become the nucleus of a herd of India artillery mules.

E. C. Loch of London, a captain in the Indian cavalry, is in Kansas City purchasing the animals, which will be shipped from Kansas City by a mule company. The mules are of the smaller type, not more than twelve and a half hands high and weighing 750 pounds each.

"We consider Kansas City the best mule market in the world," Captain Loch said the other day. "The mules, such as will be shipped from Kansas City, are aptly suited for use as artillery animals. They are used in the mountains to carry the screw guns, which are taken apart and loaded upon the mules' backs."

Champion Girl Pitcher at College.

Alta Weiss of Rogersville, O., known as the champion girl baseball pitcher, entered Wooster university the other afternoon as a member of the junior preparatory class. Miss Weiss referred with pride to the fact that she had earned the money to pay her way through college by pitching.

The Tuberculosis Congress.

An army, strong, determined and heroic, its ranks filled with the lovers of their race, and offered by men who've given years out of their lives, resigned life's ease and joys—

Aye, risked even life itself to gain the skill

That's made them leaders in this noble work—

Has met to send its challenge to the foe

And snatch the "white plague's" victim from its jaws.

Long has the race in helpless, sad despair

Gone up the awful tribute to its maw,

Onivorous in its terrible demands,

The old, with feeble strength, an easy prey

With little left to live for, glad to die:

The young, with life and pleasure still to feel,

Love's radiance showing them an Eden new.

The craving to existence keen and strong,

The dread of loss the hardest pang of all—

Both still alike to this great scourge of man

Alike the poor, the rich, the humble and the great,

The sinner, stricken in his vice's prime:

The saint, struck down in charity and prayer;

The useless, worthless lumberer of the earth,

The man whose every day aids all the race—

All fall alike; the scourge spares none to spare.

But now has risen new and glorious hope

The enemy is forced from his triumphant perch

To stern defense against assault hand pushed

The friends of man have armed themselves with steel

That finds the flaws in the armor of the foe

Once deemed invincible. Blow follows crushing blow

Unto the enemy in sore surprise

Find first his advance checked then his hand work

To leap his ground; next, driven from his aid

Is a retreat with prospect of a last and best

Effort to come. Another day's fight

The battle rages on, and the human race

Is saved from thralldom of its deadliest foe.

NEWARK'S MODERN TELEPHONE SYSTEM

Visit Paid to "Exchange" Discloses Intricate Workings With Which Public Are Not Familiar.

How little people really do know about telephones! It isn't very strange that some persons who haven't had the advantages of the modern telephone system will hold the receiver to his mouth and try to hear through the transmitter, but it is strange that people who use 'phones from ten to a hundred times a day will make awkward blunders, but they do.

A Newark woman who is noted for her big vocabulary and poor use of it was accidentally overheard holding a telephone conversation the other day from a downtown booth. She was yelling at the top of her voice, and it would be only fair to suppose that the party at the other end of the line was doing the same, but the woman in the booth couldn't hear at all, so this is what she said:

"Say, Mabel, there's no use; I just can't hear you. Shake up your transmitter a little and maybe—the c—that's better. Now go ahead."

The woman who was doing the talking has a 'phone in her home and uses it many times a day and has done so for years—in fact, she could not be without it. She knew all about 'phones—especially when they got at it—by but when it came to technical terms she lost out.

Everybody has his own idea of what the modern telephone system is like, and if all of the different ideas could be presented so that were intelligible, they would probably make some very interesting and amusing reading matter.

But when one puts forth a little effort just to find out the secret of the "bello" business, he will find some intricacies to the system that would never have been surmised.

Of all the accused, down-trodden, snubbed and insulted people on earth it would be safe to say that an accurate judge would pick poor "Central." The following set of rules, suggested by a man who surely ought to know, are self-explanatory:

If you have to wait a minute when trying to get a party, blame Central.

If your party doesn't answer, blame Central.

If there's some one "on the line," blame Central.

If there's rumbling on the line, blame Central. (But first remove your chewing gum.)

If the line is awfully busy, blame Central.

If you can't get Central on your 'phone go to some other one and give her thunder for not answering.

If you can't get the ball score, or the weather doesn't suit, or you aren't at the office on time, blame Central.

Whatever happens about the place and there's no one else to blame, call up Central and raise Ned with her.

At the same time don't forget to accuse her of "listening on the wire," for she has a whole lot of idle time that she puts in hearing your troubles.

An Advocate representative is indebted to Manager C. E. Hollander of the Newark Independent Telephone company, for an interesting visit to the various working departments of the local system and a full explanation of its operations.

The intricate system, which is at once so simple to those "hello" people who are on duty every day, involves many scientific principles, which to explain would require any amount of space and carefully prepared illustrations. But the actual operation of the system is a good example of these in operation in the larger cities. Here there are in all about 15 operators employed. Fourteen years ago two operators did the work. These 15 include two regular "shifts" of night and day operators, and "relief" operators.

A visit to the "local" room between the hours of 8:30 and 10:30 a. m., 2 to 4 and 7 to 10 p. m. will witness the flicker and constant twinkle of hundreds of little lights. Snapping and clicking of the connecting plugs and "jacks," accompanied by a low murmur of musical voices calling "Number?" "Number?" is what one hears, instead of the din and commotion that would naturally be expected where so many people are talking and working. There is such a regularity to it all. No blustering, bustling, yelling bunch of humans, each trying to out-yell the other, but a group of neat young women sitting quietly before the long switch board, dexterously connecting, disconnecting and answering subscribers in low, musical voices.

And here it might be well to note that voice cuts some figure in the selection of a telephone operator. She must not only be neat in personal appearance—a sign of care and attention—but she must have pleasant address, for a shrill, piercing voice annoys and bothers subscribers, and isn't persuasive and convincing. Like a nice, quiet, soothing tone.

Over each dozen or so operators is a supervisor, who looks after the operation of the system in general, adjusts the occasional disputes which may arise between subscribers and Central, and acts as a general guide and peace-maker.

"Information" is the one operator in the office who must know all things. Absolutely everything must be known by her, or there are people who would think she wasn't earning her pay. She is asked everything, from the legitimate inquiry about numbers, changes, removals and new 'phones, to the date of the latest Russian massacre, and one joker even had the audacity to call "Information" the other day to ask "how long is a piece of string?" "Information," who is always ready with the reply, in this case answered, "About as long as your brain would look under a microscope."

The "Multiple System" now in use by modern telephone companies is as near perfection as human skill could create. A series of three panels, punctured with hundreds of little holes, represents the "local" system. Each one of these holes represents a 'phone, and it is into these that the "jacks" are dexterously jammed when the calls come in. By means of a series of small lights over a shelf in front of the operator, she is enabled to tell which number has called. She inserts the "jack," asks for the number and makes the connection. When the party answers, the light, that flashes as the connection is made, is extinguished and does not re-light until one or both of the parties leave the line.

At each set of three panels sits an operator and before her and in reach is the connection for every 'phone on "local." For example, if No. 59 (The Advocate) is to be called, any operator can ring it. If there are ten operators, one at each multiple, there will be ten connections to No. 59, and all other 'phones on the "local" line. These ten connections run from the switch board and are joined together on the 'phone line which runs into the mass of complicated wiring and intricate electrical apparatus behind the board.

The trouble clerk is another badly bothered being. Fortunately, in most cities, "trouble" in 'phone parlance, does not necessarily involve a flistic encounter, although it is said that trouble men would often experience relief if they could indulge in a little pugilistic effort at the expense of those unreasonable subscribers who know the why and wherefore of all things—or at least think they do.

The trouble man could probably tell more amusing stories of actual experiences than any other man in the "shop," and some of the conditions he finds himself facing are actually puzzling.

One instance that occurred in Newark four or five years ago resulted in the discovery of a new brand of trouble for the 'phone people and the remedy applied here interested telephone people in other towns.

A certain party had been "enjoying" all sorts of trouble with his 'phone at various times. It seemed that whenever he was in a hurry he could not get Central but when once he finally got his party the conversation was perfectly distinct over the line. He reported the case and informed the manager that either the operator was not "on the job" half the time, or else his 'phone was connected in some out-of-the-way position on the switch board where the operator could not see it. All arguments failed to convince him that the operator was not at fault. The trouble man removed the transmitter as a last resort and submitted it to a test on the Wheatstone bridge, a scientific instrument used for testing the resistance of various substances. The test showed that the carbon used in the transmitter for proportioning the currents from the line a call is registered until both parties "hang up," are really entertaining as viewed from a practical standpoint.

The local exchange is a good example of these in operation in the larger cities. Here there are in all about 15 operators employed. Fourteen years ago two operators did the work. These 15 include two regular "shifts" of night and day operators, and "relief" operators.

A certain party had been "enjoying" all sorts of trouble with his 'phone at various times. It seemed that whenever he was in a hurry he could not get Central but when once he finally got his party the conversation was perfectly distinct over the line. All arguments failed to convince him that the operator was not at fault. The trouble man removed the transmitter as a last resort and submitted it to a test on the Wheatstone bridge, a scientific instrument used for testing the resistance of various substances. The test showed that the carbon used in the transmitter for proportioning the sound waves was of unusually high resistance and, while the voices sounded plainly, the bells could not be rung, owing to the high resistance.

Another peculiar instance of trouble often causes 'phone subscribers no end of worry. It is the breaking of a fuse, a delicate piece of wire joining a line to a cable. In these cases the subscriber is able to get Central in the day time, but at night, especially in cold weather, calls can neither be received nor sent. This is due to the fact that the wire contracts with the cooler air of the evening and expands in the day time under the heat of the sun. These breaks in fuses are so small that they cannot be seen with the naked eye and are often a source of almost endless worry to the trouble man.

The manager himself is not exempt from the attacks of the kicking subscriber, and although the service may be generally good and the system accurate throughout—and so it must be—he is bound to hear more or less grumbling.

In one case a subscriber on a party line called the manager to inform him that the other party on the same line persisted in "butting" into her conversations over the wire, and that she wanted it stopped at once. Just as she was telling the most woeful part of her tale to the manager, Party No. 2 got on the line. She also began pouring out her lamentations, asking Party No. 1 why she didn't get an independent line, and complaining that she wanted the line for an hour and a half the other morning to get some groceries and washing material, and that the other party was yelling gossip with an old neighbor. The manager listened to the highly interesting conversations, and finally said with the customary politeness of the man of telephones:

"Now ladies, that you are together on the line, I'll just let you fight it out and settle the trouble. After that, call me up and tell me how it came out."

But if all subscribers knew how many, many little things there are that go to make up a complete, generally successful telephone system, and what foolish little things are brought to the attention of the 'phone people by chronic kickers, who are always suggesting remedies which do not apply, there would be more telephone subscribers all over the country, more patience shown, and fewer instances of the nervous prostration of operators.

A good thing to think about is this: How did neighbors summon aid for the sick fifty years ago? How did business men do business successfully then? And how is it that human nature is so unappreciative of the good things science and common sense have given to the twentieth century generations?

The two teams that are to play are evenly matched and a contest full of interesting and unexpected plays can be expected by the fans who go to see the teams clash for probably the last time this season.

CLEANING CORSETS.

How Amateurs Can Wash and Freshen Them Up.

If one wishes to keep one's corsets clean and fresh this can only be done by frequent washing. The majority of cheaper corsets cannot be washed owing to the cheap steel or iron stiffening used in their manufacture. When these corsets are washed the metal forms iron mold stains in the fabric and makes them look ugly. It is therefore necessary that corsets should be of a fairly good quality or at least that the stiffening agent used in their manufacture is of a substance that will not oxidize when wet and form stains such as iron mold on the fabric.

The method of washing is to moisten corsets by placing them in warm soap lather; then straighten them on a board and brush them thoroughly with a soft brush, using plenty of soap and water, dipping them occasionally into the water to remove the loosened dirt.

When quite clean rinse them thoroughly and, if required stiff, dip them into boiling water starch. The degree of starch used depends entirely upon the stiffness required. Some people prefer their corsets to be soft, in which case no stiffness need be given.

The corsets should then be dried in the open air if possible, and when only slightly damp they ought to be pressed with an iron. This makes them smooth and more comfortable to wear.

HARMON ANSWERS

slightest difference to me whether taxes are paid or unpaid, whether money is spent or not spent on safety appliances.

But the Governor has $50,000 of these cheap state funds in banks he owns stock in. If he is swift to impute bad motives to me with reference to matters which could not affect me personally, the voters may ask whether his interest in these banks has anything to do with his singular conduct about graft in the deposit of the State funds.

One of the banks in which the State officials own stock is the Columbus Savings and Trust company. It has a sign high as a horse while by day and bright at night, visible all over the city, which offers 4 per cent on deposits. It has state funds at only 2 1-2 per cent. Was the Governor's inability to see this sign, the voters ask, due to his own banks also having the state's money at only 2 1-2 per cent?

The investigation, some of whose sessions the Governor attended, brought out the fact that the City of Columbus was getting 3 1-2 per cent interest on its funds from the Columbus banks at the same time the State was getting only 2 1/2 per cent. That the City of Cleveland was getting almost 4 per cent from the Cleveland banks while the State was getting only 2 1/2 per cent from the Cleveland banks. Was the Governor silent about this wrong against them, the taxpayers may ask, because his own banks were paying the State only 2 1-2 per cent?

When the treasurer, though twice requested by unanimous vote of the House of Representatives, refused to give the names of the banks having deposits of State funds, with rates of interest, etc., was it because he was himself a stockholder in one of those banks?

Great as the Governor's new born zeal may be in matters which are not and cannot be in issue between my party and his, because they are essentially non-partisan, he cannot hide behind them from the question why he did not discover this graft or lift his hand or voice against it when the proofs were laid before his eyes."

CHAPTER I.

THE slender jeweled hands of Olga Hoffmann trembled so that she fumbled at the looks and buttons that held together the waist she was trying to remove. Her heart beat with a violence it had not known before during the six placid years of her married life. Her face was a mask of fear—fear of the unseen, the unfathomable—of the turbulent emotions that seemed crowding, surging up from unsuspected depths in her very soul.

Mme. Hoffmann was in the studio of Karl Mahler, where she had been brought by her portly banker husband, Herman Hoffmann, that the grumpy, the sweetheart of her happy girlhood, painting her portrait for the pleasure of the man whose name she had taken, might be consumed. But it was with no thought of this that Hoffmann had taken her there or that she had consented to go or that Karl had received them. Hoffmann welcomed the artist daily to his own home and knew no jealousy. Karl, forgetful of the idyl of his youth, dwelt in thought on his approaching marriage to a beautiful young heiress. Olga, loyal to her husband, believed that the old romance was laid away among those faded dreams faintly remembered, but which come no more.

And yet her husband had gone out, leaving her there, the faded lavender of the sweet old days turned lurid, and for the first time in six years her soul confessed itself and lay bare and unshriven. But she fought down the memory and clung to those six years of silence, and all the while there was in the very air of the room an unseen presence that seemed dragging her backward through time, bridging those years clear to the day when Karl, the boy, had taken her in his arms and kissed her lips and told her that he loved her.

Now, with all of that in her heart, she yet tried to put it out of her thoughts. She forced herself to a light tone and airy words.

"Come, Mr. Mahler; I have come to get my portrait painted as my husband wishes it," she cried. "We must go to work."

Karl, torn by emotion as herself, acquiesced.

"Here are shawls from which you may select one for your shoulders," he said. "I will go and prepare the studio while you remove your blouse."

He left her so filled with fear that she could hardly bring herself to tug at the buttons that held her waist at last, flinging the waist from her.

"Ah!" she exclaimed impatiently at last, flinging the waist from her.

As it dropped to the floor her perfectly rounded shoulders and white throat were bare. She arose from her seat and reached for the filmy silken shawl she had chosen. But the shawl fell from her nerveless hands, and she drew back, with a shriek, gazing in horror at what seemed an apparition.

A melodious voice, suave, gentle, deliberate, said:

"Madame, I beg your pardon. I fear I permitted myself to fall asleep."

From the depths of a great arm chair, drawn up before an open fire, whose red light gave it sinister illumination, a man arose, stood before Olga and bowed profoundly. He was in the conventional afternoon garb of a gentleman. His frock coat was black; his hair was black; his eyebrows, eyelashes and eyes, his black. His face was white, as colorless as his immaculate linen, as expressionless as the monochrome he wore. One touch of color, red, came from the scarf.

He looked with undisguised admiration at the beautiful woman before him. But it was the cold, critical admiration of the cynic, emotionless and without life. Olga drew back from him, catching up the shawl and hiding her gleaming shoulders. As she looked at him his eyes seemed to her.

"I thought I was alone," she faltered when her voice came to her.

"When I came in some time ago M. Mahler was out, and I must have fallen asleep in his comfortable chair. Again I apologize."

Fear and suspicion dilated Olga's eyes, and she drew yet farther from this suave, polished stranger.

"There was no one in that chair a few minutes ago when my husband was here?" she cried.

"Without a flicker of expression or a trace of emotion in his even, steady voice, the stranger glanced casually at the chair from which he had emerged like a specter and replied:

"I beg your pardon. I must be mistaken."

He seemed like one who would jest with infidelity.

There was nothing trivial in his tone, and he bowed with grave politeness. As he advanced Olga retreated toward the door through which Karl had entered the studio.

"Where did you come from?" she cried.

"Ah!" he exclaimed quickly, "I come from now here; I go everywhere; I am here."

He tapped his forehead with long, elegant fingers significantly.

Those hands were as striking as his face, his face, his manner. They were restless, animated, the only part of him that seemed alive. His voice was cold, his face expressionless, his eyes unchanging in their steady blackness, but his hands were vibrant. Their gestures were lithe and swift. All impulse which he had banished from his speech, from his walk, seemed centered in his hands.

It flashed across Olga as she gazed at him that he was the incarnation of the arch fiend, the very spirit of evil purpose against which all good contends, against which she had fought unconsciously for six years. It was this terrible presence that was dragging her back over those years, painting with fresh color the faded dream, filling her heart with the wild, sweet desire of a child. She pressed her hands over her eyes to shut out the specter and cried aloud:

"Karl!"

Then she fled to meet the young artist, hurrying to answer her call.

CHAPTER II.

OLGa was a ward in the family of Herman Hoffmann when she met Karl first. A precocious boy artist, talented, but untalented, he attracted the attention of the wealthy family, and they gave him employment to further his ambition. Soon he came and went among them like one of the family, patronized by Herman, who was his senior, and adored by Olga, whose playfulness he was. He was a handsome, sturdy youth, with hair that fell in rich, black clusters over his white forehead and eyes that sparkled with foreboding life and purpose.

There was never a word of love between this boy and girl. It was the true spirit of comradeship. But they loved each other without knowing that it was love, because life was fresh and sweet to them and the days were long for playtime and dreaming. Their happiness was unclouded until the time came when it was determined that Karl should go away to Paris to study and that Olga should be given the finishing touches of her education that she might take her place in society.

Then the comrades became sweetheart hearts. When they were to be sent away from each other they knew that it was love.

"Ah, Karl, I shall be so unhappy without you!" Olga said.

"But I will come back, Olga, a great artist perhaps, and you will be prouder of me than ever."

"And will you not forget me, Olga?"

"Ah, never, my Karl!"

Karl took her in his arms then and kissed her.

"I love you, Olga. I will not forget."

The years went swiftly for Karl in his studies, and the love of a youth goes readily to sleep. As for Olga, she mourned her sweetheart sincerely for many months, but there was much in the world that she was learning about, and the few relatives she had were busy with her future. Young Herman took part in the business affairs of the family, loved her for her rare beauty, and they were married. Karl came back, famous, painted portraits and lived the life of a young artist.

Hoffmann had become a banker and a man of importance. He was slow and somewhat pompous in speech, but he was loyal in his friendship for Karl and devoted to his beautiful young wife. Karl came and went in their house almost as he had in the old days. Never once did he or Olga speak of their old love to each other. Each believed it dead. For Olga this was not strange, as she had her husband, whom she believed she loved, her home and her social life. Her time was taken up, and Karl was only a daily incident.

The young artist came back to a consciousness of Olga's beauty and sweetness. She had adopted a maternal air toward him which he found vastly diverting. Sometimes there throbbed in his pulses a beat of the old fervor, but he had himself well in control. His emotions were not wayward. He told himself daily almost that he thought of Olga as a sister. But it was significant, although he never admitted that, that he had to tell himself this same thing very often.

Thus sped the six years of Olga's contented, untroubled life. Karl lived in his studio, where notables came to be painted and models posed and flirted, and an old manservant looked after his clothes and his comfort. It was a spacious apartment, richly furnished in the trappings which artists love. There he lounged and worked, but in all the six years Olga and her husband had never been there. Karl desired most of all things in the world to paint her portrait, but he did not dare to ask. Olga never spoke of it, and it was not until Herman himself brought up the subject that it was ever discussed.

One evening at Herman's house, when Karl had been making some sketches, Herman said:

"Karl, why have you never painted a portrait of Olga? She is more beautiful than any of your models or your patrons."

"Karl, why have you never painted a portrait of Olga? She is more beautiful than any of your models or your patrons."

"Karl, why have you never painted a portrait of Olga? She is more beautiful than any of your models or your patrons."

"Karl, why have you never painted a portrait of Olga? She is more beautiful than any of your models or your patrons."

Olga was startled and glanced quickly at Karl. The young artist could not keep the blood from rushing to his cheeks, but he replied carelessly:

"Olga would do my poor art great honor. I never knew that either of you thought so well of my skill."

"Come, come," Herman cried, "I want a portrait of Olga, and you shall paint it. Let us discuss it. What sort of a pose would you suggest, Olga?"

"Really, I would have to think about it, Herman," Olga answered. "This is rather sudden, and one can't make up one's mind about a portrait so quickly."

"Why not? Now, I think a half-length portrait, in evening dress, with a shawl thrown over your shoulders, would be very attractive."

Herman had grown quite stout and wore a neatly trimmed beard. He was generous, good natured and kindly, and Karl was very fond of him as well as grateful to him and his family for the opportunities they had given him. He did not wish to oppose this whim of his friend, and he left the discussion to Olga.

"I should prefer full length in a street costume," she said.

"Not at all," Herman asserted. "The picture will be painted indoors and hung indoors, and you wear indoor clothes. Now that is settled. Karl, when shall we begin this portrait?"

"I can be ready at any time," Karl said. "Come when you will. I am quite at your disposal."

"Then let us have a sitting tomorrow. What do you say? I will take Olga to your studio, which we shall be very glad to inspect, and leave her there. I shall be very busy in the afternoon, but I can call for her when the sitting is over."

"Delighted!" Karl cried, with enthusiasm. "Olga will make a splendid model, and I shall be happy to paint you."

"Very well. I am in your hands," Olga said. "We will have a sitting tomorrow, and in the evening you will come to my reception. You will meet Elsa there."

Elsa was a young heiress selected by Olga as the prospective bride of Karl. Olga had brought them together and in every way fostered their growing fondness for each other.

"You are determined to marry me off to Elsa, I see," Karl said, laughing.

"It's high time, my dear Karl, that you took a wife and settled down," Olga said, with maternal emphasis.

"I don't like this studio life for a young man of your impulsive temperament."

"Well, I'm a willing victim," said Karl, laughing. "The moment you married people begin to try to put others in the same plight."

"Nonsense. We want you to be happy, just as we are, don't we, Herman?"

Hoffmann looked indulgently at his wife and Karl.

"Elsa will be a good match for you," he said. "And tomorrow evening should be your opportunity, my boy."

Karl felt himself strangely disturbed at the thought of Olga's coming visit. He roamed the rooms of his studio when he got home, looking at the miscellaneous assortment of pictures, arms, rugs and bric-a-brac. A few sketches in charcoal and oils he thrust inconspicuously out of sight. They were not for Olga to see. He did not awaken old Heinrich, his servant, but he busied himself rearranging the furniture and even hunted up a duster and dusted some vases and porcelains. He laughed at himself then and threw aside the brush.

"I suppose I could leave this to Heinrich," he said. "This will be Olga's first visit. And now I believe that I've wanted her to come here all the time—for six years. But it is just as well."

After Karl left them Olga and Hoffmann discussed the portrait.

"I don't suppose it will matter, my leaving you at the studio tomorrow afternoon," Hoffmann said. "I have some important business to look after. You see, Olga, I trust you."

"Of course you do, you old goose!" Olga said, laughing and pinching his ear. "Now, good night. I'm going to bed."

When she was alone her husband's words recurred to her.

"He trusts me!" she mused. "Of course he does. But why should he tell me about it tonight? Why isn't it a matter of course?"

CHAPTER III.

KARL's fitful slumber was disturbed that night by vague half dreams which oppressed him when he awoke. He was filled with misgiving, doubt, uncertainty. His thoughts, half formed, disturbing, were of Olga.

He tried to think of marriage with Elsa, but it was without enthusiasm. Warm, beautiful, affectionate, she made no impression on his heart, which seemed like ice.

He looked around the studio with aversion.

The pictures on the walls seemed no longer to represent the aspiration of the artist. They were mementos of the models who had posed and flirted and talked scandal within his walls.

He paced the floor restlessly, nervously twisting his unlighted cigarette in his fingers until it crumbled, his mouth tight, his eyebrows drawn together. Then he seized his hat and overcoat and flung himself out of the door into the gathering winter storm.

For an hour he plunged through the snow, the chaos of the storm in rushing his mood. Almost exhausted, he turned back toward his home and entered. The room glowed warmly. In front of the inviting fire was the big armchair with its wide seat, comfortable cushions and high pulpit back. As he laid aside his greatcoat he stepped toward the chair, intending to bury himself in its depth and surrender to his mood. A shudder ran over him, and he drew back, staring at the seat.

It was empty, his eyes assured him, but he could not rid himself of a feeling that it was occupied. He pressed his hands to his eyes and then flung them outward with the gesture of one distraught.

"I am going mad," he thought.

He called loudly, harshly:

"Heinrich! Heinrich!"

The old man, alarmed at his master's unprovoked violence, hastened into the room. Karl flung aside his coat, and Heinrich held for him his velvet dressing jacket. He slipped into it, shook himself and lighted a cigarette. His hands shook with nervousness, and he held them out from him that he might look at them.

"Oh, what a terrible sight!" he groaned.

"Monsieur?" Heinrich said inquiringly.

"Has any one been here?" Karl asked.

"No, monsieur; only Ma'm'selle Mimmi. She is waiting in the studio to pose."

With an impatient gesture Karl walked across the room, picked up a newspaper, flung himself on a couch and held the sheet before his eyes. He did not even see the print, but he persisted, trying to banish his restless thoughts.

Heinrich, solicitously brushing and folding Karl's coat, waited. The artist looked at him impatiently.

"Tell Ma'm'selle Mimmi I shall not need her today. She may go."

"Yes, monsieur," Heinrich said.

The servant stepped to the door of the studio and threw it open. He called out:

"Ma'm'selle, M. Karl says he will not need you today. You may go home."

Heinrich withdrew. Karl lay at full length on the couch, holding the paper before him.

A young woman daintily featured, with rounded figure, fitting lines showed through her close fitting costume, burst into the room.

Although conscious of her presence and irritated, Karl did not look. He pretended to be absorbed in his newspaper. Mimmi looked at him and waited, but as he did not speak she ventured timidly:

"Aren't you going to paint me today?"

"Er—no, not today."

"Do you not love me any more, Karl?"

The newspaper rattled with the artist's impatience and irritation, but he did not answer. Mimmi approached him.

"Do you not love me?" Karl asked.

"You said that now, but you did not say such things when you loved me. Karl. It is always the way with us poor models. At first it is, 'Ah, what shoulders, what beautiful coloring, what perfect ankles!' Then you paint us every day. And then it is: 'What in the world have you done with your figure? It is all angles.' 'What on earth have you put on your face? It is as yellow as old parchment.' And then you paint landscapes."

Mimmi burst into tears and vigorously dabbed her eyes with her handkerchief. She was an extremely pretty girl of the bourgeois type, with heavy coils of straw colored hair piled high on her head and big blue eyes that were quick to weep.

Karl arose, threw aside his paper and essayed to comfort her.

"There, there," he said, patting her shoulder. "Don't cry, Mimmi. You are full of folly today."

As quick to smile as she had been to cry, Mimmi unveiled her eyes and looked at him eagerly, her lips parting over her white teeth.

"Then you do love me, Karl? Ah, tell me that you love me!"

"Yes."

"And you will paint me again? If not today, perhaps tomorrow?"

"Perhaps, but I am very busy."

He turned from her and sat on the couch again. Mimmi's mood suddenly turned to anger, and she cried out at him furiously:

"I know that you do not love me, and I know why. You are going to be married. Yes, yes, as Karl made an impatient gesture; 'I know it is true.'"

"You are very silly, Mimmi," he said.

"I have said: I am not! It is true what I have said. I have heard all about it, but I did not believe it because I was a fool. You are going to marry Mlle. Elsa Berg, who is said to be very beautiful and who will be a great heiress, and then you will forget me, as you would be glad to do now."

"Where in the devil have you heard all of this?" Karl demanded, springing angrily to his feet.

"It does not matter. You cannot deny that it is true."

Then her mood changed swiftly to contrition, and she went close to Karl.

"But forgive me! I know it must be. Have always known, and I must have annoyed you. We models are always annoying—in our street clothes. Forgive me, Karl."

She looked appealingly at Karl, and he was moved.

"Never mind, Mimmi. Run along home now, and I promise to paint you again, perhaps tomorrow, perhaps the next day."

She threw her arms around his neck and kissed him. Then she fled from the room. Karl flung himself down on the couch again and hid his face with his arms.

CHAPTER IV.

OLGa's dream journey had been through the flowering orchard of girlhood hand in hand with Karl, and she awoke with a sense of regret that the realities of everyday life should take the place of such jocular vision. She felt strangely elated during the day and eagerly waited for the hour when Herman was to call for her and take her to Karl's studio.

"I wonder what it will be like there?" she asked herself a dozen times. "I think I have always been jealous of that studio and its possibilities, and I have always wanted to go there—but I did not dare."

Then she chided herself for the thought she had not uttered.

"Why, I'm a goose! What am I confessing here to myself? That I am in love with Karl? What silly nonsense! Come, Olga, you are getting lunatic."

Herman came after luncheon, and they drove together to the studio building. Old Heinrich admitted them, his eyes growing big and round at the imposing splendor of Herman's greatcoat and the bewitching beauty of the grand lady.

Karl, in his artist's velvet jacket, hurried forward to greet them.

"Welcome to my workshop!" he cried.

"How do you do, Karl?" Olga said, barely giving him her hand and turning at once to let her eyes rove curiously around the walls of the room.

"How do you do, Karl?" Herman said. "You see we are prompt. And now I am curious to see your place."

Karl watched Olga as she surveyed the room. He felt piqued at her seeming lack of interest in him.

"So this is your wonderful studio," she said absently.

"It is much like a junkshop," Karl said deprecatingly.

"It is very interesting," Olga said.

"Whose picture is that?" she asked, pointing to a painting of a half nude figure on the wall.

"That? Oh, that is a model who has posed for me."

"Oh, yes; I recognize it. We met the girl on the stairs, Herman."

AMUSEMENTS

"WHEN OLD NEW YORK WAS DUTCH."

It has been said recently that Al. H. Wilson is slowly and surely joining the ranks of the "has-beens" as a singer. Whatever may have been his faults in the vehicle of last year, his singing of last night was fairly pleasing. Mr. Wilson still possesses the remains of what was at one time an excellent voice, and which still emits some round, rich tones, delivered with the grace of his former master knew so well how to use. In "Helen," "Auf Wiedersehn Fraulein" and "The Old Chimney Corner," the old time beauty of style of Mr. Wilson's singing was demonstrated. The nasal tones and occasional flatness of tone quality were unpleasant at times.

Mr. Wilson's personality is, however, heroic as ever, and he took occasion to respond to the prolonged applause after each act. Following the third act, "Metz" gave a little curtain talk and delivered a "line of jolly" to his audience that brought many laughs.

The play was nicely staged here, prettily costumed and well acted. Mr. Wilson has about him a company of clever performers. A pretty woman with a good voice and some ability is Miss Irma La Pierre, who appears in the leading role, that of Lady Helen. William Balfour as Lord Edward Grey, was exceptionally good in his portrayal of a right-hand man to the Dutch governor Richard Nichols (Fletcher Harvey) a part that was also pleasingly interpreted.

A small but valuable adjunct to the cast was Miss Olive Wright as Kilde Kupp, a privileged character. She is a child actress of a whole amount of talent that it would be interesting to watch develop from season to season.

GREAT SOUTHERN THEATRE.
Of the season's many successful dramatic productions in London, undoubtedly the greatest success was scored by the plays from the pen of W. Somerset Maugham, and it is his "Lady Frederick" that Ethel Barrymore will present the present season in this country. "Lady Frederick" is the first of the Maugham plays to be produced, and its success was astonishing. All London raved about the brilliancy of the dialogue and the cleverness of its author. From a practically unknown author he became England's popular playwright. The role of the heroine is said to suit Miss Barrymore to a nicety, and she portrays a wholesome, if somewhat impetuous young Irish widow of title. Charles Frohman has surrounded Miss Barrymore with an exceptional company and will present the actress at the Great Southern theatre, Columbus, on Tuesday, Oct. 13.

The offering at the Great Southern Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 14 and 15, will be Rose Stahl in James Forbes' big comedy hit, "The Chorus Lady," an attraction which has to its credit three years of success in the large cities of the country.

As Patricia O'Brien, a member of the chorus, she is credited with giving one of the greatest characterizations the American stage has known and critics unhesitatingly rank it with Mr. Mansfield's "Chevalier" and Mrs. Carter's "Zaza."

She Likes Good Things.

Mrs. Charles E. Smith of West Franklin, Maine, says: "I like good things and have adopted Dr. King's New Life Pills as our family laxative medicine, because they are good and do their work without making a fuss about it." These painless purifiers sold at F. D. Hall's drug store, 25c.

The papers will include an illustrated sketch by Prof. Andrew F. West on the ex-president's residence at Princeton, and his resting and influential connection with the affairs of a great university.

A social hour will follow the services, to afford an opportunity of meeting the visiting brotherhood men from other cities, who will be in attendance.

The services are public, and all are cordially invited to be present.

For Sore Feet.

"I have found Bucklen's Arnica Salve to be the proper thing to use for sore feet, as well as for healing burns, sores, cuts and all manner of abrasions," writes Mr. W. Stone of East Poland, Maine. It is the proper thing, too, for piles. Try it! Sold under guarantee at F. D. Hall's drug store, 25c.

ALMOST MONARCHY.
